Finished water quality remains strong at all three treatment plants with iron and manganese levels well within our treatment goals. Water quality complaint totals remain low although this is expected to pick up as we begin spring flushing.

Water quantity pumped for January saw a slight uptick over 2017 due to water breaks that were the result of deep frost from a cold December. This trend settled down in February with March consumption equal to 2017. The Department is bracing for the busy second and third quarters as people open their yards and pools.
